

Supporting special needs children and their families

Parenting a child with special needs can be a rewarding yet challenging journey. Whether your child has chronic physical, developmental, behavioral, or emotional conditions, navigating the complexities of healthcare, insurance, and support services can feel overwhelming at times. However, you don't have to face these challenges alone. Our Health Advocate team is here to provide the guidance and resources you need to ensure your child receives the best possible care.

Our advocates are dedicated to helping you:

- Understand and maximize your insurance coverage to minimize out-of-pocket costs
- Identify and connect with the right healthcare providers for your child's unique needs
- Research in-home care and school land community-based services
- Identify leading treatment centers
- Arrange second opinions and facilitate transferring records
- Research conditions and latest treatment options
- Discuss medications, side effects and generic equivalents
- Explain Medicaid and other benefits issues
- Untangle medical bills; uncover errors
- Locate counseling to help you and your family cope with the demands of caregiving
- Research resources to help navigate the special education system, including special education rights and professionals to help with IEP concerns, etc.
- Direct to other resources you may need, such as support groups

With our personalized assistance, you can focus on what matters most - providing your child with the love, nurturing, and opportunities they deserve to thrive. Remember, you are not alone on this path, Health Advocate is here with you and your family every step of the way.
